

New England School of Fine Art presents
Portrait Drawing & Painting
With Jo Ellen Reinhardt

Learning to draw and paint the portrait is a delightful journey. It challenges the artist to see subtle angles and shapes of the human form. This class is for both the beginner to professional artist wishing to learn about drawing and painting the portrait or brush up on their skills. This course will focus on composition, values, edges, lite anatomy and more. Each class will start with a quick demonstration. One on one instruction will be given to help individual students meet their personal goals. The first five classes will be taught in graphite and charcoal. The last three classes will be devoted to one long pose where instruction will be in oil painting. This term we will focus on Verdaccio which is a green underpainting. Beginning students may choose to continue in graphite or charcoal. Optional homework will be assigned to help students fine-tune their skills.
